The problem whether a manager can or cannot compel a vocal artist to accept an encore has probably not been veriously considered hitherto. Performers are, as a rule, only too ready to respond to demands made upon them by an audience or portions of it, and it can hardly have occurred to any one to conceive that an occasion would arise in which a vocalist would be censured by his employer for not conceding an encore. Such an occasion, however, would seem to have arisen in connection with an English operatheatre, and the case, it is said, is certain to come into court. The singer has been fined one night's salary for his alleged irregularity, and, according to his statement, the fine has been justified by the management on the basis of a private regulation, to the offect that any artist in its employment refusing to take a "call" shall be liable to a fine in question.

We shall not attempt to anticipate the decision which may hereafter be given, but, apparently, much will depend upon the meaning attached by judge and jury to the expression "faking a call." In ordinary theatrical parlance a "call" is simply a summons to the footlights, not a request for the repetition of a song or verse. It would, however, be almost a plty if the problem named above escaped legal pronouncement because of the nicety of meaning here involved. It would be interesting to have it formally declared whether an artist has any choice in the matter of encores, or whether he or she must concede them willy nilly. Should the latter conclusion be arrived at, some vocalists will feel that a new hardship has been thrust upon them, and salaries may rise accordingly. The general public also would be more than ever at the mercy of those whose passion for encores is undiscriminating.—London Globe.

The Women of Connemara are picturesque in attire and shapely in form to a remarkable degree. Their limbs are long and graceful. They are erect and spirited in carriage, and the immense black braideens, or cloaks, with which all shortcomings in clothing are shrouded, fall in truly classic folds about them. Bare limbed as the men, at all seasons, you will not infrequently catch glimpses of legs as exquisitely moded as those of the Venus of Cos; while the most voluptuous types of southern Europe, or languorous, tropical Cuba, furnish no more perfect examples of taparing, dimpled arms, beautifully formed shoulders, and full but lengthened neck with dove like double curve. The broad, large faces are still superbly oval. The chin has strength, the full, shapely mouth is red and tenderly, expressively curved, the regular teeth are charming in pearl white glint and damle; the nose is large, well cut, with thin, sensitive nostrils; the eyes, under long, heavy lashes, look straight and honestly at you out of clear, large depths of gray or blue; the eyes, under long, heavy lashes, look straight and honestly at you out of clear, large depths of gray or blue; the eyes under long, heavy lashes, look straight and honestly at you out of clear, large depths of gray or blue; the eyes under long, heavy lashes, look straight and honestly at you out of clear, large depths of gray or blue; the eyebrows are marvels of nature's penciling; the forehead is wide and fair, and such heads of hair crown all that were they unloosed the Connemara woman could stand clad in lustrous black immeasurably surpassing her sloe black braideen.
